Conflict

Conflict is…

• Normal
• Happens continuously
• Emotional
• Stimulates changes
• Part of life
• Major or minor ~ depending on the situation and energy

Why do we get into conflict?

• Different goals (concerns or desires differ from another person’s)
• Common goals but different approaches
• Change
• Scarce resources
• Poor communication
Can you manage conflict?

- Anticipate conflict
- Design systems to minimize conflict
- Improve leadership & communication skills
When you are prepared you can…

Build on the positive outcomes of conflict:
- Stimulates creativity
- Builds long-term relationships
- Personal, professional, and organizational growth
- Problem addressed, conflict is resolved
- Shared decision-making strengthens team
- Leadership emerges

Minimize the negative outcomes of conflict:
- No results
- Destroys relationships
- Destruction of trust
- Someone wins, someone loses
- Unwillingness to work together
- Expensive litigation
- Community leadership declines
- Loss of individual / team confidence
Think of one word that best describes how you feel when you have to deal with a conflict situation.
WHICH IS YOUR STYLE UNDER STRESS?
The Five Conflict Modes

- Competing
- Collaborating
- Compromising
- Avoiding
- Accommodating

Assertiveness
- Assertive
- Unassertive

Cooperativeness
- Uncooperative
- Cooperative
Which is your ‘default’ approach to conflict?

*compete  *avoid
*accommodate  *compromise
*collaborate

Food for thought…
Managing Conflict Situations in your work:

How might your personal conflict style affect some chronic conflict situations?
   What might you do differently?
   What can your team do differently?

✓ You have choices in a conflict
✓ Give yourself time to think
✓ Choose your words carefully…
The free flow of understanding between two or more people
Preserve the Relationship

Tell the facts & impacts, on yourself & others, without judgment

Explain the outcome you want
I’d really like us to resolve this in a way that works for both of us.

Ask for other views, thoughtfully and with respect:
How do you see the situation? I wonder if maybe . . . Is it possible that . . . Do you see it differently? What am I missing?

Create Safety

Dialogue = Open, Honest Communication

LISTENING

Tell the facts & impacts, on yourself & others, without judgment

Explain the outcome you want
I’d really like us to resolve this in a way that works for both of us.

Ask for other views, thoughtfully and with respect:
How do you see the situation? I wonder if maybe . . . Is it possible that . . . Do you see it differently? What am I missing?

Develop a Shared Purpose

Commit to stay in dialogue, by asking: “Are you willing to…?”

Recognize each others’ needs, the reasons behind the position each is taking; ask “Why do you want that?”

Invent a mutual purpose with both/and thinking: “How can we satisfy both your needs and mine?” “What do we both care about?”

Brainstorm both/and solutions.

Diagnosis & Intervention for complex problems:

Data - Agree on which data are important & which criteria to assess data

Relationships - Improve communication & build positive attitudes

Interests - Develop integrative solutions; focus on interests not positions

Active Listening Skills Continuum

Ask------Probe------Restate------Paraphrase------Summarize------Reframe

Ask: Listening begins with someone talking. Sometimes to get a conversation going all it takes is a simple question: “What do you think about that?” “How are you feeling about that?” “What’s your view?”

Probe: Use gentle questioning to help others share their thoughts and feelings if someone has withdrawn or is silent. If they’re still not talking, guess what they might be thinking and ask them if you’re right. This should help them feel safer sharing.

Restate: Repeat what was said, using words close to those of the speaker. Restating assures the speaker that you have heard them. It also demonstrates your intention to start the conversation from where “they are” instead of skipping ahead to what you want to say. In other words, it shows your intention to understand their position.

Paraphrase: Restate what you think the speaker meant, using your own words. Begin with phrases like: “So I think you’re saying…”; “I’m hearing that…”, “Let me see if I understand…”, “So your view is that…” and check to see that you understood things correctly: “Did I get that right?” If the answer is “No” try again. It may take several tries to get it right. This step helps to confirm that you both understand what was communicated.

Summarize: Paraphrase, adding your understanding of the emotion the speaker is expressing. This can also be called ‘mirroring’. Use phrases like: “I sense that you’re feeling...”; “I get the impression that...”, “Maybe you’re feeling...” This legitimizes the speaker’s feelings and often helps them release negative emotions so they can look towards constructive solutions.

Reframe: State the situation in neutral language, describing what you’ve understood the speaker really wants. For example, from “I’m sick & tired of the way they make me do most of the work,” to “I’m hearing that you’d like them to share the load and be equal partners in this project.” This leads into envisioning constructive solutions to the problem.

Positions and Interests

Positions: A group’s desired outcome(s)

Interests: A group’s underlying goals, concerns, values or needs

Invent a mutual goal: Discussing everyone’s interests, not their positions, leads toward shared solutions
“I know that you believe you understand what you think I said, but I’m not sure you realize that what you heard is not what I meant”
