An estimated 378,137 households heat with LP or oil, which are more expensive than pellets (depending on the price source). This represents the potential that could be converted to wood-based thermal systems. If households heated with electricity were added, the number would 695,806.